

Anthony Marrian

---

From: Anthony Marrian
Sent: 16 May 2013 14:01
To: 'mail@greghands.com'
Subject: History

Possibly you don't remember 1997. Although I voted Conservative, I felt the most blissful relief when the Conservative Party lost the general election. Why? Because I, and most of the country, were utterly fed-up with the Europe-bickering such was the unutterable tediousness of it.

And what do we have now? Exactly the same, over and over, on and on. They say that any man can make a mistake once but only a fool makes the same mistake twice.

As for referendums, you should be careful what you wish for. Personally, I elect a representative to act with wisdom on my behalf. You let the referendum cat loose and how then do you justify refusing one on hanging?

We look for leadership but all we find are empty spaces

With best wishes

Anthony Marrian