

Dear Mr Marr

I hope you are drowned in letters of support for your paragraph in The Spectator's Diary on the hideous French Connection. I have to walk past their Kings Road shop every day on my way to Waitrose and I feel like chucking a brick through their window every time I do so. Their children's shop right next door is thankfully free of the new branding although as T-shirts there now sport UKFC perhaps it is only a matter of time...

We miss you as editor of The Independent
