

Dear Emmylou

If I remember correctly, it was 20th November 2000 when you came to play for us at the Albert Hall. We had such a great time that I've been meaning to write to you ever since to say thank you; to take nearly two years over it is a bit eccentric I know, but hey!

Now, one other thing: Wrecking Ball. There is some music that is so good that you buy the CD and play it over and over again. There is other music that is just special, such that you hardly dare play it for fear that one day it might lose its magic. Wrecking Ball is like that for me, and "Going Back To Harlan" is its pinnacle. I had none of the McGarrigle sisters' music, an omission for which I have more than made up since, so thank you for that too.

Come back and play for us soon
